

Argentina

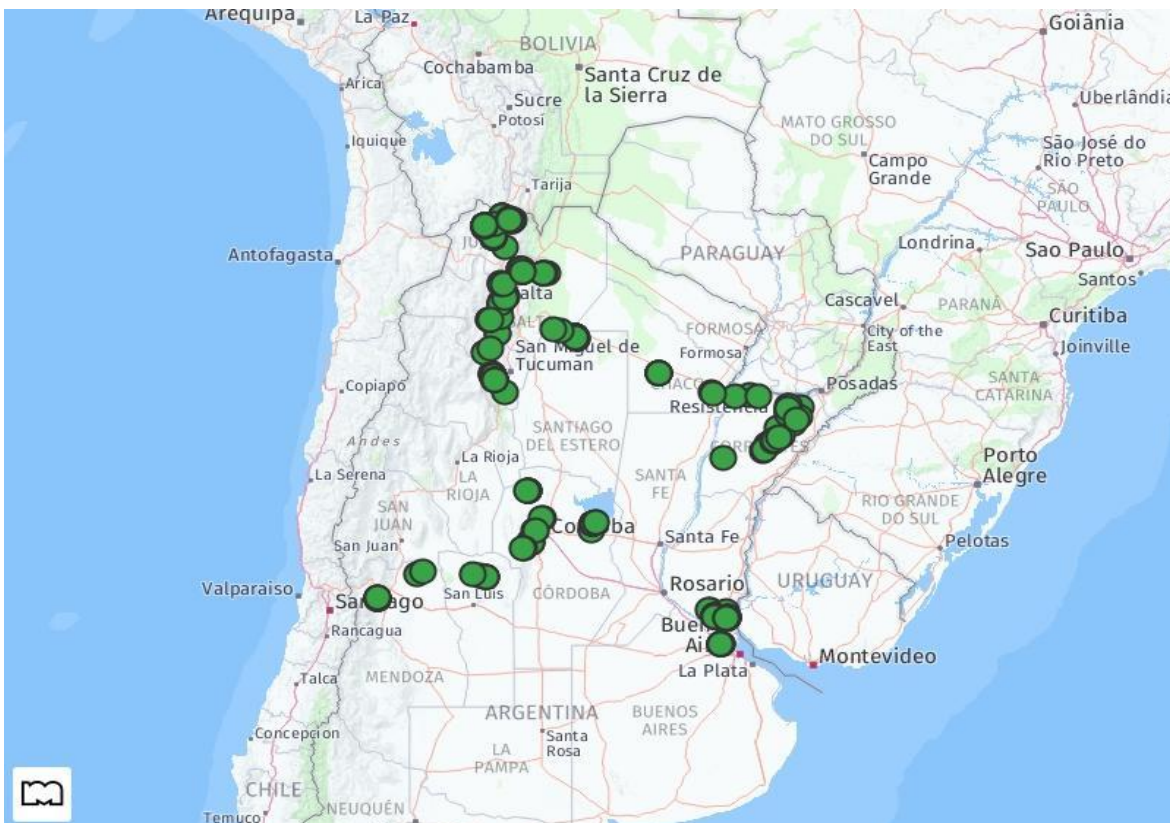

30 November – 22 December 2018

Introduction

After hiring a car in Santiago de Chile, we crossed the border into Argentina around Mendoza and spent almost 7 weeks exploring this amazingly diverse country: From the beautiful Andean landscapes in the Northwest, crossing the dry chaco to the wet marshes around Ibera, then from Buenos Aires following the coast down south through the endless pampas and then into the Patagonian steppe, Argentina has some awesome birding to offer.

This report focuses on the first part of the Argentina leg; Mendoza – Córdoba – NW Argentina – Ibera – Buenos Aires. For some photos see: <https://photos.app.goo.gl/jGp1cixDMHxwKJFP7>

Itinerary

November 30	Portrerillos (near Mendoza) - Quebrada Higuieritas
December 1	Quebrada Higuieritas - Pampa Acala - Icho Cruz
December 2	Icho Cruz - R.N. Vacquerias - Dean Funes
December 3	Dean Funes - Salinas (Monjita) - Tafi del Valle
December 4	Tafi del Valle - Infiernillo pass - Amaiche - Cafayate
December 5	Cafayate to Cuesta del Obispo
December 6	Cuesta del Obispo - Maquis valley - San Lorenzo (Salta)
December 7	San Lorenzo - Cornisa road - Yala
December 8	Yala to Abra Pampa
December 9	Abra Pampa + Laguna de Pozuele (to Yavi)
December 10	Yavi - Liberator General San Martin (Calilegua)
December 11	Calilegua NP
December 12	Calilegua NP
December 13	Calilegua NP
December 14	Calilegua to Taco Pozo
December 15	Taco Pozo - Chaco NP (Las Curiosas)
December 16	Las Curiosas Chaco NP - Ibera
December 17	Ibera - Carlos Pelligrini
December 18	Carlos Pelligrini - Ibera naar Santa Fe
December 19	Santa Fe - Mar Chiquita
December 20	Mar Chiquita - Ceibas
December 21	Ceibas to Otamendi
December 22	Otamendi to Buenos Aires

Some notes with the itinerary

- In hindsight it is probably wise to add a day in Chaco west of Cordoba plateau. In general we struggle a lot with all the Chaco species: Icho Cruz seemed a logical place upfront but while there it felt like we were unable to find good birding places. Also around Taco Pozo we struggle to find the logical places to bird (and the weather/ bad roads did not help). We skipped Chaco NP; we had limited information about the place and it was a quite some distance off the main route.
- We should have tried for Steinbach's Canastero around Mendoza but at that point we were not aware of this
- We should have tried for Black-legged Seriema and Black-crowned Monjita around Cafayate
- When we drove up to Abra Lizoite we thought it might be possible to drive all the way to Santa Victoria and try for Bolivian Warbling finch. And although driving all the way there is probably a nice adventure it turned out to be very far (given the speed you can go on these roads and including birding) so we did not get there.
- Our stay at hotel Curiosas was a bit of a lucky surprise since it produced some nice birding (including our only Black-bodied Woodpecker of the trip)
- Our visit to Ibera was added on late in the trip without much info (and we were rained out).
- Mar Chiquita would have fitted better in our trip if we wouldn't have added Ibera, now it was way off route and didn't add to much.
- How to bird the grasslands around Ceibas was not really clear in advance, see Ceibas section
- Costanera Sur (Buenos Aires) is a nice first stop when arriving in country, but Otamendi is the only essential Buenos Aires stop.

General notes/ practicalities

- ATMs/ getting money was every time a hassle – a lot of times ATMs were out of order and the line of people waiting to get money could be over an hour long. Since we came from Chile (where getting money was not an issue at all) we were not fully prepared. In hindsight it might be more practical to bring dollars?
- Most restaurants in Argentina only open after 8:30PM, which is not ideal if you are on a birdwatching rhythm with early sunrises.
- Driving in Argentina: obligatory to have your lights on during the day (we were stopped the first day when we entered the country from Chile). Also obligatory to have triangle and fire extinguisher in your car (we were also stopped for this).
- Not much information – preparation with Ebird, also meant that often it was not clear how to find birds – especially for the Chaco species we were struggling a lot (both Icho Cruz and Taco Pozo it was unclear for us how to find the birds and it feels like we missed a lot/ not visited the best areas because of this).
- We bought a local simcard (more difficult than we expected since it had to be registered with an Argentina ID, in the end the lady from the store used her own ID-number to register our simcard). It was very useful to have internet to look up new info on ebird/ accommodation but in general the internet speed was very slow making this a time consuming effort.
- No accommodation was booked upfront, we used google, maps.me and booking.com along the way to get an idea of the options and mostly just showed up.
- We had rented a Suzuki Vitara (4WD) in Santiago de Chile. This worked well for most of the trip but still some roads were difficult in wet conditions even with 4WD: especially the wet clay roads in the Chaco

Visited Sites

We took a few GPS points of sites and specific birds, those are available here

<https://www.google.com/maps/d/viewer?mid=1x6C0BszeiKyYBqX9bA0U8wqwabpxBnli&usp=sharing>

Portrerillos

This was our first birding spot in Argentina after crossing the border from Chile. Main target here was Monte Yellow Finch of which we found a large group of about 40 birds at -32.9682, -69.1823. We saw a few birds at other stops we made in the dry scrub around the lake. Steinbach's Canastero is seen here as well (but we weren't aware of that at this stage...)

Quebrada Higuieritas

We found this hotspot on Ebird (-32.39474, -65.91763) and given the long list of Chaco species this provided a nice first stop in this habitat to already find a few targets. We did a short birding stop in the afternoon and were pleasantly surprised to find a nice broad trail through the Chaco. We had arranged to sleep in a nearby hotel (Hotel Lujan) but unfortunately they did not serve dinner on the day we were there, so at 8:30PM we set out to the nearby village to find an open restaurant (which at this time in the evening the first ones were just getting ready to open). The next morning we returned to the Quebrada Higuieritas but the weather was less ideal - it had rained a lot during the night and the wind was still very strong making birding difficult. Still it was fun birding we manage to add some species before we start driving at 9:30AM.

En route towards Cordoba we tried a couple of places for Black-bodied woodpecker (bases on eBird) but without success.

Pampa Achala

Pampa Achala is a plateau with little vegetation, lying at an elevation of over 1500m. We arrived in the beginning of the afternoon in drizzle and fog. When we get to the first birding stop it is still wet and cold but sort of dry and we walk a bit and manage to see the first Cordoba Cinclode here. The next stop was near a bridge at -31.6119, -64.7930 and it turns out all 3 targets are easy here Olrog Cinclodes, Puna Canastero, Cordoba Cinclodes at same site. Given the bad weather we were very happy the targets are found so quickly and we continue further towards Icho Cruz.

Icho Cruz

We had very little information about Icho Cruz; we based our preparation on the trip report of Thomson 2016 and some additional ebird points. We birded the first afternoon along the road at -31.4548, -64.59165 but it did not feel like the right habitat and we fail to find the long list of species that is supposed to be here. The next morning it still rains at 5AM but at 6:30 the weather has improved. We drive up the same road from yesterday, this time we try some more stops higher up but the activity is very low. In hindsight we should have prepared this part of the trip better and maybe find a better Chaco site around Cordoba. We leave around 9:30 towards R.N. Vacquerias.

R.N. Vacquerias

This is a beautiful reserve on the edge of the escarpment at -31.11411, -64.4532. We walked the trail that goes through some Chaco-like bushy vegetation. The Olive-crowned Crescentchest is commonly heard and we have great views of a bird at -31.1133, -64.4486. Also our first Andean Slaty Thrush here. We speak to the ranger who tells us he often sees Black-bodied Woodpecker around the hotel. We search for a while but without luck. Around 4PM we leave and start our drive towards Dean Funes.

Salinas

The Salinas is easy to get to from the main road. We took the turnoff at -29.99543, -64.59736 and then turned right at -30.04667, -64.66229. We arrived around 7AM and it did not take long before we found a Salinas Monjita at -30.0471, -64.6869. We did some more Chaco birding from the Salinas to the turnoff and then some birding stops along the main road until 11AM.

Rio los sosa & Tafi de Valle

Driving out of the plains the habitat changed quickly to Yungas forest while climbing up alongside the fast flowing river. It was already in the afternoon but we saw our first Yellow-striped Brush finch at -27.0324, -65.6571, further along the road it was common. Rufous-throated dipper was found at -27.0180, -65.6562 (flight views only) and then again at -26.9847, -65.6642 (where there is a small stretch of old road you can walk on). We easily found accommodation in Tafi del Valle and even something to eat at a reasonable time.

We started the next day with a short drive down to the lake just below Tafi del Valle to scan for some waterfowl. There are several dirt tracks from main road to lakeside, and probably dependent on water levels to see where the birds are.

Infiernillo and around Cafayate

We birded the way up to the pass with different birding stops which worked well (almost no traffic on a good asphalt road and beautiful sunny weather). We heard Huayco Tinamou at -26.7999, -65.7226. In the first quebrada we found Tucuman Mountain finch (-26.7919, -65.7277) and also Subtropical Doradito, White-browed Tapaculo and Andean Tinamou. A bit further we birded the "two-quebrada stop" at -26.77594, -65.72914 which results in Grey-hooded Parakeet, Moreno's Ground Doves, Subtropical Doradito and Brown-capped Tit-spinetail.

Almost at the top we had a gps point for Scribble-tailed Canastero which required a side walk of just over 1km to reach (at 3000m this walking uphill is a nice workout). The valley starts at 26.7378, -65.7629. We saw some nice birds; Buff-breasted Earthcreeper, Streak-fronted Thornbird, Puna Canastero, Ash-breasted Sierrafinch, Andean Hillstar & Ornate Tinamou (HO) but no Scribble-tailed Canastero (we mostly searched around here -26.72595, -65.75771)

On the other side of the pass the habitat is drier. We stopped at a dry quebrada (-26.70606, -65.79555) where we saw Patagonian Mockingbird & Rusty-vented Canastero at -26.7049, -65.7941. Steinbach's Canastero should also occur here but we found out too late that we did not have a recording of this species and first needed to download it the next time we had internet. By now it was hot, dry, and windy and activity had completely died down. We had a nice lunch stop in Amaiche del Valle and since it is still hot we first drove to Cafayate to arrange a hotel. Later in the afternoon we came back and with a bit cooler temperature the activity has returned. We found a White-throated Cacholote at -26.5535, -65.9621, Sandy Gallito at -26.1763, -65.9459 and two more White-throated Cacholotes in a dry river bed at -26.1245, -65.9701. We then waited for dusk and tried for Chaco owl along road at -26.2182, -65.92319 but failed (not a single sound of an owl or nightjar).

After a night in Cafayate the main target for the morning was Steinbachs Canastero. By now we had gathered some more info and sounds and the second stop we made at -26.0224, -65.8353 we found it. After this we do a few more stops in the beautiful dry landscape (which also results in some Rusty-vented Canasteros). Then we drove out of the dry valley. A parador turistica offered a nice rest stop for lunch at -25.57928, -65.57371. According to Ebird Plush-crested Jays are often seen here (not this time) but we have some nice Chaco Chacalacas. We did a short try for Black-legged Seriema (based on some ebird sightings) but without luck and then continue towards Cuesta del Obispo.

Cuesta del Obispo

We arrived, we did some birding stops at quebradas driving up (Fulvous-headed Brushfinch at -25.1745, -65.7647). We had found a hotel on maps.me (Parador el Maray at -25.18476, -65.78026) and were very happy to find it open when we showed up in the afternoon, and able to provide dinner. In the last hours of the day we explored the road up some more but given the strong wind birding was difficult. The next morning we had breakfast at 6:30 and then drove up to the first good site for Mountain Tanager at -25.1777, -65.8158. The weather had improved; a little clouded and no wind. Although we did not find the Tanager we do see Zimmer's tapaculo, Fulvous-headed Brushfinch & Tucuman Mountain Finch.

We then drove further up to the Maquis valley (-25.16663, -65.85003). This valley provides very good birding although the weather made it more difficult by this point (clouds and fog). Given the weather conditions we decided to first drive to the other side of the pass (which is a very dry plateau with cacti but we do not find any birds of interest). Coming back to the Maquis valley we walk in further and this time we are lucky and find a Rufous-bellied Mountain Tanager (at -25.1660, -65.8520). Other species seen at the Maquis valley were Maquis Canastero, Tucuman Mountain finch, Rufous-side Warbling finch and Rock Earthcreeper (the Earthcreeper was seen at more stops driving up).

San Lorenzo

When we drove down from Cuesta del Obispo the rain started and it continued to rain all the way to San Lorenzo. We stayed at Hotel Selva Montana (-24.7264, -65.4979) which is situated in a nice green area and we had seen on ebird/tour reports that quite a good list of birds is possible to see in the garden. Given the endless rain the only birding in the afternoon/evening was done from the window of our room, but the next morning it was dry again and we had some nice birding in the garden before breakfast including Slender-tailed Woodstar and Dusky-legged Guan. We then drove a short distance to a road nearby that goes through a mix of Yungas and open habitat. At the start of the road we found Cream-backed woodpecker at -24.6997, -65.4743. We made a few additional stops and found e.g. Dot-fronted woodpecker.

We then moved on to Camino de la Cornisa, a small winding road (asphalt) through beautiful Yungas forest. It was already 11AM when we arrived but the activity was still very high. We made a few stops and birded from -24.5126, -65.3442. The last stop provides Rufous-capped Antshrike at -24.5049, -65.3279. Around 2PM we continued our drive towards Yala.

Yala

In Yala we stay at Complejo El Refugio (simple accommodation, camping and restaurant), very close to the road up to Yala NP. Although it was drizzling, we explored park a bit in the afternoon and already found a Spot-breasted Thornbird and at the same spot heard the first Red-faced Guan (-24.1156, -65.4683). The next morning the weather had cleared up and we drove back up. At a stakeout for Rufous-throated Dipper (-24.1209, -65.4614) we found a nice pair of Torrent Ducks (no Dippers though). In the same corner where we heard the Guan the day before we saw at least 2 Red-faced Guan and one Dusky Guan. We then continued higher up and walked and birded a bit more (seeing amongs others a nice Rust-and-yellow tanager at -24.1112, -65.4831). Since we had seen all targets we drove back down (around 10:30) and started driving towards Abra Pampa.

Abra Pampa

The drive from Yala to Abra Pampa is beautiful. We made a few stops along the way but did not see anything of interest (there was very little activity and walking outside in the hot, dry and high altitude climate is challenging). Just before reaching Abra Pampa we made a stop at a small lake (-22.7661, -65.7133 and turn-off at -22.77332, -65.70525) that had some waterfowl including Giant Coots, Chilean Flamingos and a big group of Wilson's Phalarope. We arranged a hotel in Abra Pampa and around 5PM we went to a wetland/marshy area on the NW side of town along a small river at -22.7107, -65.7101 where we saw some more Flamingos and some grassland species. We found Bright-rumped finch at -22.6687, -65.7049 before we went back to the hotel.

Laguna Pozuela

The road from Abra Pampa to Laguna Pozuela is a corrugated dirt road of 50km. The turnoff is at -22.47319, -65.9963 and from there the 7km to where you park the car (at -22.4303, -65.9927) is already very good for birding (Ornate Tinamou, Lesser Rhea and mammals many Guanacos and Vicunas). When we arrived the lakeshore was still quite far away but you could already see endless pink, the immense number of Flamingos. With the telescope we walked the last bit of grassland towards the lake (this is at 3700m). Given the amount of birds the view was stunning but scanning for targets was not easy. We did some scan-walk – scan – walk iterations until we found 2 Horned Coot (with young!) that showed very well in the scope from -22.4046, -65.9908.

Yavi

We stay in El Mirador de Yavi (-22.1319, -65.4610), a very nice hotel. After we arrived in the afternoon we did a bit of birding around the village where we found Wedge-tailed Hillstar at -22.1275, -65.4662 and Citron-headed Yellow-finch on along the road to Casti at -22.1527, -65.4496. At the end of the day the wind became very strong making birding almost impossible so we went back to the hotel and enjoy an early dinner and night.

Abra Lizoite

The road changed quickly from asphalt to dirt road as we drove up towards the pass (at 4500m elevation at -22.2184, -65.2261). From here we continued with a couple of bird stops and a bit lower down we found a Straight-billed Earthcreeper at -22.2212, -65.2205. A bit further we were happily surprised by a Diademed Sandpiper plover with chick at -22.2005, -65.2111. Also Buff-breasted Earthcreeper was seen here and an Andean Hillstar came in visiting the small red flowers on the hillslope.

We continued the road through the beautiful montane landscape and found a Slender-billed miner (-22.2253, -65.1160) and Short-tailed Finch (-22.2585, -65.1182). This road continues to Santa Victoria (the place for Bolivian Warbling Finch) but given how slow the driving goes on these roads this is way too far to reach on just a single day and we decided to go back. We did not take the same way back but instead a decided to drive a back road to Lizoite (-22.2761, -65.11666). This created a nice round trip but the road was in very bad shape and we almost did not make it. This section would definitely be impossible without 4WD. Our de-tour did however reward us with some nice birding as we found Puna Yellow-finch & Plain mantled Tit-Spinetail at the start of village (-22.24981, -65.15337) and Thick-billed Siskin at -22.2323, -65.2077. Around 2:30PM we were back in La Quiaca and decided to continue driving to Calilegua (4,5hour drive).

Calilegua NP

We arrived just before the end of the day in Libertador General San Martin where we arranged our stay at Hotel Posada del Sol (-23.81675, -64.80017) for the next 4 nights. It is a bit more expensive than most of the accommodation we had in Argentina but this place is very nice and they are used to cater for birdwatchers (early breakfast is no problem, they provide bird information at the reception and the laundry service was also very welcome). The next 3 days we had breakfast at 5:30 and then drove up to Calilegua NP for the birding. This worked well although it meant that when staying up late in the forest for owls you had to drive down the whole way again and up the next morning (in hindsight camping one night around the Monument-area would have been a good idea). Around midday activity became very slow and on all days we drove down for lunch and sit out the heat for a bit. Over the three days we birded in different places along the road going up:

- Parking-Lagunita (around -23.7543, -64.8543): There are some trails to explore here but each time activity was quite slow here. Ochre-cheeked Spinetail was common, other birds seen here were Great Rufous Woodcreeper, Cream-backed woodpecker, Barred Forest-falcon.

- 2nd Ranger station (at -23.6998, -64.8668): We had very good views of Giant Antshrike at -23.6996, -64.8673 and after a long battle a White-throated Antpitta that showed well at -23.7004, -64.8713. Walking down from ranger station we one day had 17 Toco Toucans gathered in one tree.
- Around the Monument area (-23.6816, -64.9015): We saw Blue-capped Puffleg on bigger flower banks (it seemed to be chased away by White-bellied Emerald). We did some owling here on the first and 3rd night (the second afternoon/evening it was non-stop raining). We heard Buff-fronted Owl on both tries but were not able to get any views. On both nights we also had 2 Yungas Screech Owls of which one gave brief views flying over the first time.

Chaco birding around Taco Pozo and towards Resistencia

En route from Libertador General San Martin to Taco Pozo we made a short stop to try for Black-legged Seriema (at -23.8186, -64.2124 North of Palma sola). We did not find any Seriemas but we did see our first Chaco Puffbird. When we arrived in Taco Pozo we arranged a hotel and then continued birding in the nearby Chaco (based on observations from Paul van Els). There are several dirt roads into the Chaco and we could drive in quiet far while doing several birding stops along the way. No sign of Seriemas again but the birding was nice and we found species like Crested Hornero and Little Thornbird. The highlight was a Quebracho crested Tinamou right next to the car at -25.6673, -63.2268.

After a night in which we woke up several times of the thunder and rain it turned out the next morning that most of the dirt roads were now completely impassible because of the rain. The had turned into super slippery brown clay/mud that stucked to the wheels and made driving impossible. We tried to drive into the same area as yesterday but very quickly we had to stop. We decided to leave the car and continue birding on foot (still tricky and slippery to walk). The activity was good and in a corner of the road we heard the Seriema (at -25.6492, -63.2361) but we were unable to see it. A bit further we heard 2 more birds but they do not respond very well. The weather was very grey with some more drizzle now and then. We birded on until around 11AM and then (a bit disappointed) continued our drive east again. Back on the main road we tried a couple more times to enter a side-road that looked promising but each time the road was so bad with mud that it was impossible.

We decided to end this day at Hotel las Curiosas (-26.71322, -60.7515), a hotel along the main road but on a big property with a promising ebird list). The hotel grounds were very birdy and both in the afternoon and the next morning we had some nice birding. The grounds turned out to be especially good for Woodpeckers and we saw Checkered, White-fronted, Cream-backed & finally our Black-bodied woodpecker (-26.7156, -60.7478). Walking along the mountain-bike track was very birdy late afternoon.

The next day driving onwards to Resistencia we saw a Chaco eagle en route at -27.1087, -59.5857.

Ibera

Driving from the Chaco towards Ibera the habitat changes and became wetter and already from the car we saw our first Greater Rheas and Southern Screamers. The last stop of the day was at Cambyreta. The went through the first gate at -27.7207, -56.8595 and from there we slowly birded by car into this spectacular wetland. We found Ibera Seedeater at -27.7542, -56.8627 and Crested Doradito – 27.8630, -56.8757. Overall it was very birdy along the whole route (Rusty-collared seedeater, Dark-throated Seedeater and many Capybaras). Back at the first gate at dusk the last new species of the day was a nice Nacunda nighthawk. Since it was already dark we found a simple hotel in the next village to spend the night.

The next morning we continued towards Carlos Pellegrini. The first bit of the road was still asphalt but then changed into dirt road. We had prepared some birding at Galarza (turnoff at -28.10066, -56.66491) which is supposed to be a good place for Stripe-backed bittern. But the entrance gate turned out to be closed without any signs for opening times so we continued. We did some birding along the road for seed eaters and we found Marsh seedeater at -28.1351, -56.6913. The first Black-and-white Monjita at -28.3815, -56.8851 and we saw at least two more driving towards Pelligrini. We tried Yellow Cardinal before Pelligrini but failed. At the end of the morning it became hot and windy with not much activity. We went into Carlos Pellegrini for some lunch and to fix a hotel. In the afternoon we explored the other side of Pelligrini. The road on this side turned out to be broad enough to stop the car for birding now and then (although more busy with traffic than in the morning). We encountered the first Strange-tailed Tyrant at -28.5758, -57.2279 – it turned out they are rather common further along the road. Lesser Grassfinch was found at -

28.6183, -57.2744 and Rufous-rumped & Chestnut seedeater at -28.7389, -57.4935. By then the weather was getting worse by the minute with a big weather front of rain coming in combined with strong winds. It rained the rest of the evening, the full night and into the next morning. A couple of hours after sunrise it got a bit drier and we started our birding. It turned out the roads have suffered severely with all the rain and had become slippery and difficult to drive. We tried the Yellow Cardinal spot again but without any luck. Given the bad roads we carefully drove back and then decided to start our way out of the area before we would get stuck any further. The entire drive out until we reach the asphalt was extremely muddy and wet with our entire car brown of the mud.

In hindsight we were happy that we included Ibera in our itinerary since it provided some awesome birding. But we did miss a lot giving that we did not have a lot of preparation and the weather made it quite difficult. When we reached the town of Mercedes we cleaned the car and drove until Santa Fe where we spent the night.

Around Santa Fe

This was the stopover between Ibera and Mar Chiquita. Based on ebird we tried a few birding spots in the morning, some with success and some turned out to be unreachable as sometimes happens with Ebird info. The best birds of the morning were Large Elaenia and Black-backed Water Tyrant (-31.5777016, -61.1406937).

Mar Chiquita

We arrived in the afternoon and started by driving the dry fields south of Mar Chiquita in search of wintering Upland Sandpipers (without luck). After fixing a hotel we continued to the Birdwatching Tower at -30.9466, -62.7121. We had expected more bird variety here but it seemed like the water was lower than normal. Dinellis Doradito was still very easy to find, and Freckle-breasted Thornbird was found in the scrub as well. The next morning we tried again around the tower and also explored some other places based on ebird but we were unable to find good marshes. In general we were not sure how to bird here effectively or maybe we were just unlucky with the lake water being rather low and sedges really dry. We left Mar Chiquita again a bit disappointed, this was a lot of driving with very little reward.

Ceibas area

The main target we were searching for here was Saffron-cowled Blackbird. We arrived around 4PM with dark skies. We found a good road into the marsh behind a village at -33.4379, -59.0703 with some good marsh birding. When we did not find our target we went to the other side of Ceibas to explore further at -33.4963, -58.7457. We found very good marsh birding along the road but we failed to find our main targets. Also the next morning we had very nice birding but no luck with the target. Although we had limited info here it does feel like we had the right strategy but were just unlucky. Maybe to increase chances you could try the areas around Perdices or Gualaguaychu as well but we did not go there.

Otamendi

We did a first visit late afternoon and came back after a night in Campana in the early morning. Birding was a bit slow but in the end we did find the Straight-billed Reedhaunter at -34.2071, -58.8869. Curve-billed Reedhaunter and Black-and-chestnut Warbling Finch were common. Other species included Ash-colored Cuckoo (heard) and Diademed Tanager. Around 11AM it had become hot, dusty and quiet and we decided to leave toward Buenos Aires.
